DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Margaret Gallagher Price house located on the west side of Hipsley Mill Road, is a two-story frame farmhouse with a gable roof, sitting on a stone foundation and angled into the sloping hillside. The front entrance facade features a two-story porch extending the entire three-bay length of the facade. The bottom story of this porch is at basement level and shelters two doors opening onto basement storage rooms and flanked by two windows. There are four rectangular supports for the porch at this level, and these are mirrored above on the first floor level by four turned baluster supports equally spaced across the porch and dividing the facade into three bays. These three bays are further defined by a central doorway with simple rectangular transom and sidelights and flanked on either side by two 2/2 windows. On the second story level are three 2/2 windows elaborated in simple fashion by plain wooden surrounds; the central one of these is surmounted by a semicircular glazed opening centered within a wall dormer.

The entire house is sheathed in clapboarding, painted white with contrasting wooden cornerboards, painted dark green; the wooden entablature consists of a plain, unadorned frieze topped by a molded architrave and features returns about a foot in length on the gable ends of this building.

The west gable end consists of two 2/2 windows in corresponding locations at the first and second story levels. Just under the eaves is a pair of smaller square 2/2 windows. The east gable end is punctuated by an identical set of openings except for a door at the southeast corner, approached by a short flight of wooden steps, which takes the place of a window on the north elevation.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house, with centrally placed wall dormer or cross gable, is a typical turn of the century form, found throughout Howard and Montgomery counties.

This example was built some seventy years ago by the Chrobot's, Polish immigrants, and it remains well tended by the current tenant.
